How can I tell if my courses are remote/online or face-to-face?

Fall 2020 Information

Fall 2020 schedule changes are continuing to be made to the delivery method for courses and sections. Classes are meeting face-to-face, fully online, or a mix of both face-to-face and online.

- If a class has only one meeting line that states WEB ON LINE, then that class is fully online. (This may be referred to as "asynchronous/online.")

- If a class shows with days and times but a location of either LHUP or CLFD and ON LINE, then it is an online class meeting on those specific days and times but students will not be in a classroom as they can attend anywhere online. (This may be referred to as "real-time remote" or "synchronous/online.")

- If a class shows meeting days, times, and a classroom location, then it is a face-to-face class. Students will either attend all classes face-to-face or faculty may rotate students in and out on certain days. The days the students are not sitting in class, they may be participating via zoom. Faculty will be making those arrangements individually. (This may be referred to as "true face-to-face," "hyflex" or "rotating students.")

How will I access my remote courses?

Faculty will send students information, including Zoom links, as appropriate, the week prior to the start of the semester.
